THE INQUIRY.

Tell me, ye winged winds,
That round my pathway roar,
Do ye not know some spot
Where mortals weep no more?
Some lone and pleasant dell,
Some valley in the west,
Where, free from toil and pain,
The weary soul may rest?
The loud wind dwindled to a whisper low,
And sighed for pity, as it answered "No."

Tell me, thou mighty deep,
Whose billows round me play,
Know'st thou some favored spot,
Some Island far away,
Where weary man may find
The bliss for which he sighs,
Where sorrow never lies,
And friendship never dies?
The loud waves roaring in perpetual flow,
Stopped for a while, and sighed to answer, "No."

And thou, serenest moon,
That with such holy face,
Doth look upon the earth
A sleep to night's embrace,

Tell me, in all thy round
Hast thou not seen some spot
Where miserable man
Might find a happier lot?
Behind a cloud the moon withdrew in wo;
And a voice sweet, but sad, responded "No."

Tell me, my sacred soul,
Oh! tell me, Hope and Faith,
Is there no resting place
From sorrow, sin and death?
Is there no happy spot
Where mortals may be blessed,
Where grief may find a balm,
And weariness a rest?

Faith, Hope, and Love, best boons to mortals given,
Wav'd their bright wings, and whispered, Yes, in Heaven!

Excellent resolution.... Resolve never to speak of a man's virtues before his face, nor of his faults behind his back—a rule, the observance of which would, at one stroke, banish from society both flattery and defamation.

Death bed scene.... "Pooh, pooh!" said a humane lady impatiently to her expiring husband, as he strove to give her a few last words, "don't stop to talk, but go on with your dying!"

Life.... The life of man is like water poured out of a bucket, which the earth quickly sucketh up and appeareth not again.

Aquarius,
Water-bearer

JANUARY—Prepare hot beds for Cucumbers. As little can be done this month in a garden, I would advise the preparing of manure, and carrying it to your beds, that it may be ready to be spread on in February.

Planting out Cabbages, Beets, Parsnips, Carrots, Salsafy, Turnips and Celery, to produce seed. As soon as the weather is tolerably mild in March, plant out the above vegetables for seed, them thin in an airy place, where they can receive no moisture, in order that they may dry and harden gradually. Be careful to turn them occasionally, and not to lay such a quantity together as will cause them to heat. When they are sufficiently dry, beat them out clean and lay them away in boxes or bags.

Education.... Education is a companion which no misfortune can repress, no clime destroy, or enemy alienate; no disposition enslave; at home a friend; abroad an introduction; in solitude, a solace; in society, an ornament; it chastens vice; it guides virtues; it gives at once a grace and ornament to genius.

Aristotle says, all who have meditated on the art of governing mankind, have been convinced that the fate of empires depends on the education of youth.

To ascertain the weight of Live Cattle.

First, see that the animal stands square, then, with a string, take his circumference just behind the shoulder-blade, and measure the feet and inches—this is the girth. Then measure from the bone of the tail which plumbs the line with the hinder part of the buttock, and direct the string along the back to the forepart of the shoulder-blade, and this will be the length. Then, work the figures thus:—Suppose girth of bullock 6 feet 4 inches, length 5 feet 3 inches, which multiplied together make 33 square superficial feet; and these, multiplied by 23—the number of pounds allowed for each superficial foot of cattle measuring less than seven and more than five feet in girth—make 759 lbs. When the animal measures less than nine and more than seven feet in girth, 31 is the number of pounds to be estimated for each superficial foot. And suppose a small animal to measure 2 feet in girth and 2 feet in length, these multiplied together make 4 feet, which multiplied by eleven—the number of pounds allowed for each square foot when cattle measure less than three feet in girth—make 44 lbs. Again, suppose a calf or sheep, &c. to measure 4 feet 6 inches in girth, and 3 feet 9 inches in length, that multiplied together, makes 16 square feet, and these multiplied by 16, the number of pounds allowed for cattle measuring less than 5 and more than 3 feet in girth, make 256 lbs. The dimensions in girth and length of the back of cattle, sheep, calves and hogs, taken this way, are as exact as is at all necessary for common computation or valuation of stock, and will answer to the four quarters of the animal, sinking the offal. A deduction must be made for animals half fat, of one pound in twenty from those that are fat; and for a cow that has had calves, one pound must be allowed, in addition to the one for not being fat, upon every twenty.

LOVERS' QUARRELS.

"Mary!" said Henry Ashton. The maiden looked up.

"Mary! I have much to tell you—will you listen to me awhile, only for a moment!" and he spoke fast and eagerly.

"A moment only, did you say—well, I suppose I must,—but what a beautiful butterfly is that. Oh! the dear, sweet, tiny thing; do, pray, try and catch it for me."

Ashton was stung to the heart. He had been on the point of declaring his long-cherished passion for Mary Derwentwater, and he felt that she knew, not only the depth of his affection, but that the words trembling on his lips were an avowal of his love. Her light-heartedness at once changed the whole current of his feelings. Often had he heard others say that his beautiful cousin was a coquette, and more than once had she trifled with his own feelings. He had hoped that her conduct was the result only of a momentary whim, but this last act displayed a confirmed heartlessness of which an hour before he would not have deemed her capable. He sighed, and was silent.

"Oh! dear, how ungallant you are," continued his cousin, "the beautiful creature will really escape, and I do so love butterflies."

"It is gone." "So it is. I shall never forgive you. Don't ask me to," said Mary affectedly.

"Then we must part without it," said Henry carelessly. "I leave here to-morrow, and shall visit Europe before I return. It may be years—it may be forever that I shall be absent."

"Why—Harry—you jest," said his companion, struggling to appear composed, although she felt how cold and pale her cheek had grown. "I never heard of this before. You are not in earnest," and she laid her soft white hand—that hand, whose touch made every nerve of Ashton thrill—on her lover's arm, looking up into his face with her dark, and now melting eye. But the chord had been stretched until it had snapped, and her influence over Ashton was gone. He half averted his head, as he answered coldly,— "I do not jest, especially with a friend."

The tone, the emphasis, the manner, all stung the pride of Mary. She felt that his censure was just, and yet she spurned it. Her hand fell from his arm, and emulating his own coldness, she said,— "Then I will not ask you to stay. But as it is late, and you will have your preparations to make, I will not intrude on your time," and courtesying, she withdrew.

"And this is the being in whom I had garnered up all my heart's best affections," exclaimed Ashton, when he found himself alone. "This the divinity I have adored with a fervor no mortal bosom ever yet felt, and she could talk, heartlessly talk of the merest trifle, when she saw that my whole heart was bound up in her. Oh! would we had never met. But my delusion is over. I will fly. Mary! Mary! little did I dream that my love would meet with such a return."

Mary hurried to her chamber, and locking the door, she flung herself upon the bed, and burst into a flood of tears. How bitterly she reproached herself that her momentary coquetry had lost her the love of the only being for whom she cared. She did not disguise from herself her affection; she could scarcely tell why she had yielded to the impulse of that fatal moment; but she felt that she had lost irretrievably the esteem and the affections of her cousin. She would have given worlds to have recalled the last hour. Even now she might, by seeking him, and throwing herself at his feet, perhaps, regain his love. She rose to do so. But when her hand was on the lock she thought that he might spurn her. She hesitated. In another moment her pride had regained the mastery.

"No—I cannot—I dare not. He will turn away from me. He will despise me. Oh! that I had never, never said those idle words," and flinging herself again on the bed, she wept long and bitterly.

Mary appeared that evening at the supper table, but in the cold and averted looks of Ashton, she saw only new causes for pride. The evening passed off heavily. As the time came for retiring, Henry approached her to bid her farewell. She thought her heart would burst her boddyce, but commanding her emotion by a violent effort, she returned his adieu as calmly as it was given.

And they parted, both in seeming carelessness, but one at least in agony.

Henry Ashton had known his lovely cousin scarcely two years, but during that time, she had been to him a divinity. Never, in his wildest dreams, had he imagined a countenance more surpassingly beautiful than hers, and to her, accordingly, he had given his heart, with a devotion which had become a part of his nature. But much as he adored his cousin, he was not wholly blind to her faults. He saw that she loved admiration, and he feared she was too much of a flirt. Yet his love had gone on increasing, and, he fancied, not without a return. Led on by his hopes, he had, during a temporary visit at her father's house, seized an opportunity to declare his passion, but how the half breathed avowal was checked, we will not recapitulate. Need we wonder at his sudden resolution to fly from her presence, and, by placing the ocean between them, to eradicate a passion for one whom he now felt to be unworthy of him? Few men could be more energetic than Ashton. In less than a week, he had sailed for Europe.

Oh! how Mary wept his departure! A thousand times she was on the point of writing to recall him, but her pride as often prevented the act. She hoped he might yet return. Surely—she said—he who had once loved her so deeply, and who must have known that his affection was returned, would not leave her forever. Hour after hour she would sit watching the gate for his return, and hour after hour she experienced all the bitterness of disappointment. When, at length, she read in the newspaper that he had really sailed, she gave one long, loud shriek, and fell senseless to the floor. A fever, that ensued, brought her to the very brink of the grave.

Ashton went forth upon the world an altered, almost a misanthropic man. His hopes were withered: his first dream of love had vanished: he felt as if there was nothing for him to live for in this world. His mind became almost diseased. He loathed society, then he veered to the other extreme, and craved after excitement. He sought relief in travel. He crossed the steppes of Tartary—he traversed the deserts of Arabia—he lived among the weird and ruined monuments of Egypt,—and for years he wandered, a stranger to civilization, seeking only one thing—to forget. He never inquired after America. His family were all dead, and he wished never to think of Mary. Like the fabled victim, in the olden legend, he spent years in the vain search after that Lethe whose waters are reserved for death alone. He found it not.

And Mary, too, was changed. She rose from that bed of sickness an altered being. Never had she known the full depth of her affection until the moment when she found herself deserted. The shock almost destroyed her; and though she recovered after a long and weary sickness, it was to discard all her old habits, and to assume a quieter—yet, oh! how far more beautiful demeanor than in her days of unmitigated joy. She felt that Henry was lost to her forever, yet she derived a melancholy pleasure in living as if the eye of her absent lover was upon her. She directed her whole conduct so as to meet his approbation. Alas! he was far away: she had not heard from him for years; perhaps, too, he might be no more; then why this constant reference of all she did to his standard of excellence? It was her deep abiding love which did it all.

Four years had passed when Ashton found himself again in America, and sitting, after dinner, with one of his most intimate friends, at the table of the * hotel. For sometime the bottle passed in silence. At length his companion spoke.

“You have not seen Mary Derwentwater yet—have you, Harry?”

Ashton answered calmly, with a forced effort, in the negative.

“You must not positively delay it. Do you know how beautiful she has grown?—far more beautiful than when you went away, although then you thought her surpassingly lovely.” He paused.

“I have not heard from the family for years,” said Ashton at length, feeling that his companion expected some reply.

“Then you know nothing of her? push us some of the almonds—why, my dear fellow, she is irresistible. But she is different from what she used to be; her beauty is softer, though not so showy, and whereas she once would flirt a little—mind, only a little, for she is a great favorite of mine—she now goes by the name of the cold beauty. A married man, like myself, can speak thus warmly, you know, without fear of having his heart called in as the bribe of his head. And do you know that my wife suspects you of having worked the reformation?”—Ashton started, and was almost thrown off his guard—“for it began immediately after a long illness, that happened a few weeks after you sailed.”

Ashton was completely bewildered. He had now for the first time heard of Mary's sickness. His eye wandered from that of his companion, and he felt his cheek flushing in despite of himself. He covered his embarrassment, however, by rising. His companion continued,

"And now, Harry, let us stroll down Broadway, for, to tell the truth, I promised my wife to bring you home with me. Besides, Mary is there, and I've no doubt," he continued, jocularly, "you are dying to meet her."

Ashton could not answer; but he followed his friend into the street, conscious that Mary and he must meet, and feeling that the sooner it was done the better. His companion, during their walk, ran on in his usual gay style, but Harry scarcely heard a word that was said. His thoughts were full of his cousin. Had she indeed become cold to all other men from love to himself? Strange and yet delicious thoughts whirled through his mind, and he woke only from his abstraction on finding himself in Seacourt's drawing-room, and in the presence of his cousin.

Mary was on a visit to Mrs. Seacourt, and did not know of Ashton's intended coming until a few minutes before he made his appearance. Devotedly as she loved her cousin, she would have given worlds to escape the interview; but retreat was impossible, without exposing the long treasured secret of her heart. She nerved herself, accordingly, for the meeting, and succeeded in assuming a sufficiently composed demeanor to greet her cousin without betraying her agitation. He exchanged the common compliments of the occasion with her, and then took a seat by Mrs. Seacourt, who had been one of his old friends. Mary felt the neglect; she saw he did not love her. That night she wept bitter tears of anguish.

"And yet I cannot blame him. Oh, no!" she exclaimed, "it is all my own fault. He once loved me, and I heartlessly flung that affection from me which I would give worlds now to win. But I must dry these tears; I must not betray myself. We shall meet daily, for he cannot help coming here, and to shorten my visit would lead to suspicions. I must therefore school myself to disguise the secret of my heart."

And Ashton did come daily, and although his conversation was chiefly devoted to Mrs. Seacourt, he neither seemed to seek nor to avoid his cousin. Now and then he found himself deep in a conversation with her, and he thought of old times. But the memory of their last interview came across him at such moments like a blight.

"How wonderfully Ashton has improved since his travels," said Mr. Seacourt one morning, as she and Mary sat tete-a-tete, sewing; "and do you know," continued she, looking archly at her companion, "that I deem myself indebted to you for his charming visits."

Mary felt the blood mounting to her brow, and she stooped to pick out a stitch.

"Oh! you are always jesting, Anne; you know it is not so."

"We shall see. I prophesy that this afternoon, when we go to the exhibition, he will escort you, and leave Miss Thornbury to Seacourt's nephew." Mary's heart beat so she could scarcely answer, but she managed to reply.

"Don't, my dear Mrs. Seacourt, don't tease one this way. You know, indeed you know, Ashton cares nothing for me," and she felt how great a relief would have been a flood of tears, could she have indulged in them.

Mrs. Seacourt smiled archly, and said no more.

The afternoon came. The little company were assembled in the drawing-room. Ashton entered just as the last moment had come, and when the ladies were rising to go. Mary was almost hidden in one corner, so fearful was she of attracting the raillery of Mrs. Seacourt, by placing herself near the entrance, and in Ashton's way. Her very sensitiveness produced the effect she wished to avoid. The gentlemen naturally sought partners nearest them, and for a moment she was left almost alone. She thought she would have fainted when she saw her cousin cross the room and offer to be her escort.

They proceeded to the exhibition. For the first time for years, Ashton's arm upheld that of Mary. At first both were embarrassed; but each made an effort, and they soon glided into conversation on indifferent subjects. What a relief it was to Mary that night, to think she had been alone, as it were, with her cousin without being treated with neglect.

From that day the visits of Ashton to Mrs. Seacourt's increased in frequency, yet there was nothing marked in his attentions to Mary. Indeed, he still continued to converse chiefly with his friend's wife, though he did not openly avoid her guest. Mary grew more and more tremblingly alive to his presence, and at times, when she would detect his eye bent on her, half sadly, half abstractedly, her heart would flutter wildly, and a delicious hope would momentarily shoot across her mind; but soon to fade as quickly.

One morning, Ashton entered the drawing-room, and found her alone. She was untangling a skein of silk. She arose, and said, with some embarrassment,

"Mrs. Seacourt is up stairs; I will ring for her."

"Not for the world, if she is in any way engaged. I can await her pleasure."

There was a silence of some minutes. Mary could scarcely breathe: she knew not what to say. Her fingers refused to perform their duty, and her skein of silk became more and more entangled.

"Shall I help you?" said Ashton, approaching her. "My patience used be a proverb with you."

Mary could not trust herself to answer, for her fingers were actually trembling with agitation. She felt she could have sunk into the floor. She proffered the silk without looking up. Ashton took hold of one end while she retained the other. Neither spoke; but Mary's bosom heaved tumultuously, while Ashton felt his heart in his throat. At length, in mutually untangling the skein, their hands met. The touch thrilled them like lightning. Ashton almost unconsciously retained the hand of his cousin in his own. She trembled violently. "Mary!" he said.

She looked half doubtingly, half timidly up.

"Mary, we love each other—do we not?"

There was no answer, but as he pressed the fingers lying passively in his grasp, the pressure was gently returned, and, bursting into tears, his cousin fell upon his bosom.

And Ashton and Mary have been wedded for years, but their honey-moon still continues, for they have not yet quarrelled.

Beautiful Superstition.... In Poland every individual is supposed to be born subject to some particular destiny or fate, which it is impossible for him to avoid. The month of his nativity has a mysterious connection with one of the known precious stones, and when a person desires to present the object of his affections with an acceptable present, a ring is invariably given, glittering with the jewel by which the fate of that object is imagined to be determined and described. For instance, a lady is born in January—her ring must therefore be jacinth or garnet, for these stones belong to that peculiar month of the year, and express "constancy and fidelity."

Here is a list of every month, which we faithfully transcribe for the benefit of our fair readers.

January—Jacynth or Garnet—Constancy and fidelity in every engagement.

February—Amethyst—This month and stone preserve mortals from strong passions and insure them peace of mind.

March—Blood stone—Courage and success in dangers and hazardous enterprise.

April—Sapphire and Diamond—Repentance and innocence.

May—Emerald—Success in love.

June—Agate—Long life and health.

July—Cornelian or Ruby—The forgetfulness or the cure of evils springing from friendship or love.

August—Sardonyx—Conjugal Felicity.

September—Chrysolite—Preserves from or cures Folly.

October—Aqua marine or Opal—Misfortune and Hope.

November—Topaz—Fidelity and Friendship.

December—Turquoise or Malakite—The most brilliant success and happiness in every circumstance of life; the Turquoise has also the property of securing friendly regard; as the old saying, that "he who possesses a Turquoise will always be sure of friends."

Not to be staved off.... We have frequently succeeded in our attempts to laugh poverty and misfortune out of countenance; but nothing can move disease to merriment—all our efforts result in vapid grins.

Will Nobody Marry Me?—A Comic Song.

Heigh-ho! for a husband!—heigh-ho!

There's danger in longer delay!—

Shall I never again have a beau?

Will nobody marry me, pray?

I begin to feel strange, I declare!

With beauty my prospects will fade!—

I'd give myself up to despair

If I thought I should die an old maid!

I once cut the beaux in a huff!—

I thought it a sin and a shame

That no one had spirit enough

To ask me to alter my name!

So I turned up my nose at the short,

And rolled up my eyes at the tall;

But then I just did it in sport,

And now I've no lover at all!

These men are the plague of my life!—

'Tis hard from so many to choose!—

Should one of them wish for a wife,

Could I have the heart to refuse?

I don't know—for none have proposed!

Oh, dear me!—I'm frightened, I vow!

Good gracious!—whoever supposed

That I should be single till now?

Autumn.... We are now in the autumn of the year—the season of golden hues and fading verdure. Nature's chill breath is imperceptibly passing over leaf, plant and flower, and imparting to them all the tincture of approaching decay. The green carpet of creation is being superseded by one of yellow or more motley colour, and all around and about us tells of the perishable nature of things. It is a season pregnant with reflection, for it admonishes that decay is an inherent principle of nature. It bids those of us who have not yet entered the "sear and yellow leaf" of life to prepare ourselves for that period—to husband our resources for it, as the farmer does his quiet glow of satisfaction, such as an autumnal evening's sun imparts to a landscape.

To those who have already passed the Rubicon of middle life, it tells that the advent of life's winter is fast approaching;—like an index to some particular passage of a book, it points to the termination of life's journey—to death and to the grave!

Autumn is a chaste and gentle season;—it has not the cold frigidity of winter about it—it has not the coquetry of spring, nor the fire and passion of summer. Like true friendship, it brings a soothing balm to the mind, without operating in fiery action on the passions. Its winds are mild as a mother's voice—its suns shine on the world calmly as a father smiles on his beloved family. We would that an autumn breeze should sing our requiem—we seek no sweeter music!

ENIGMA I am a word of ten letters—My 5, 10, 1, 3, 10 and 9, is a thing unknown; my 6, 5, 9, 3, 8, 1 and 2, is a fowl; my 5, 8, 1 and 10, is a number; my 7, 10, 3, 6 and 4, is a boy's name; my 6, 9, 9, 10 and 3, is an amphibious animal; my 1, 7, 6, 8, 5, 9, 10 and 3, is restraint; my 2, 4, 5, 9, 10 3, 8, 1 and 5, is a disease, my 5, 9, 8, 7, 9 and 5, used by boys; my 3, 6, 1, 2, 10 and 9, is a fish; my 5, 6, 1, 8, 10, 9 and 4, makes friends; my 1, 2, 8, 5, 10 and 7, mechanic's tool; and, my 7, 8, 1, 6, 3, 8, 1 & 10, is a root.

Greater by far than head or heart, My chiefest, best, and noblest part, My real dignity thou art,	My Pocket.
What matter it how learned or wise? Such mean distinctions all despise, In thee alone true merit lies,	My Pocket.
For though the truth may harshly sound, Here man and beast alike are found, Each only valued at per pound;	My Pocket.
When I was poor and Tompkins fine, Why was I never asked to dine? Alas! Alas! the fault was thine,	My Pocket
Or, if I made a morning call, Why did I shiver in the hall? This was my crime, the worst of all,	My Pocket.
But when my rich relation B—— Left me his only legatee, How glad was Tompkins then to see	My Pocket.
Then invitations by the score Loosened the knocker at my door: Strange it was always stiff before,	My Pocket.
Then hosts of albums, lily-white, Came rolling in with notes polite, And—Would I but one stanza write?	My Pocket.
Jane, who to all my vows was mute, Or called me fool and ugly brute, Now wheedling sigh'd—Would no one suit	My Pocket?
Then first my little nephews knew Their uncle's house was No. 2; Was it respect for me or you,	My Pocket?
My surest stay, my best ally, When duns were loud and friends were shy, On thee my future hopes rely,	My Pocket.
Befriend me still, thy suitor prays, Great chairman of the means and ways, In losses, panics, quarter-days,	My Pocket.
Thus helped, I will not care a pin, What bubbles burst, what parties win, Or who are out, or who are in,	My Pocket.

Homely Lyrics, conveying Homely Truths.

Man to the plough;	Man tally-ho;
Wife to the cow;	Miss piano;
Girl to the yarn;	Wife silk and satin;
Boy to the barn;	Boy Greek and Latin;
And your rents will be netted.	And you'll all be Gazetted.

Charades

1 Transatlantic my first, where it grows in the field,
My second is fill'd with the produce it yields,
My third is a gift kings have often bestow'd
On ambassador, envoy, or favorite lord;
Yet though given by greatness, and held in great store,
May be frequently found in the hands of the poor.

2 My first, without an edge, can wound,
And most severely cut;
My second's edge should sharp be found,
And safest when close shut;
Without my whole, my first can ne'er
Its properties fulfil,
Or soil the white transparent glare,
With its most blackening skill.

A Riddle

My form's immense, from far I come,
Or thro' the northern seas I roam;
'Till my last breath is sunk in night,
And then I give to others light.

Questions

Why is a man who makes picture frames like a person at the head of a dinner table?
Why is a dictionary like a hand-post in a cross road?
Why is a man who hawks his greens about the street, like one of the officers at the lord mayor's court?
What did Adam first set in the garden of Eden?
Why is the Prince of Wales like a rainy day?

Coming View.... The young, when they have left their youthful school, flatter themselves that they have escaped for ever from tasks and tasking school-masters. Alas, they know not that the world is a perpetual school of bitter tasks, and harder stripes—yea, of stripes that reach even to the heart—and tasks whose letters are tears!
